

Engineered
by Clemco

The moisture separator is the first inlet point for compressed air to the blast machine and eliminates remaining moisture. It does not replace the general need for dry air supply to the machine. Moisture in a blast machine system causes increased wear and clogging of media.

Area of application	dehumidification for blast machine air supply
---------------------	---